Family First is committed to appropriate security as it is essential for the family to be safe. Our nation's security has both a domestic and international dimension.

A sense of security that incorporates both domestic and international dimensions is essential for the family. Family First is committed to winning the war against terror and acknowledges the need for careful deployment of our armed forces, in cooperation with allies and the international community.

Family First sees the promotion of social, economic and political justice as integral to our global responsibilities and integral to removing the causes of the war on terror and will champion a meaningful increase in the level of Australian overseas aid.

Family First will support measures to strengthen the capacity and improve the efficiency of Australia's intelligence services and believes in the need for the nation to protect its borders in an orderly and compassionate manner.
